Classification of job, include:

- Competence
- Responsibility
- Strain
- Working conditions - pressures

Advantages

Gives a new perspective to the salary system

- Points to “hidden” salary differences
- Brings out facts about salary structure & decisions
- Base for discussions

Increases the credibility of the salary system:

- Legitimacy
- Traceability

Job classification is useful in HR management systems in general

- HR Analysis & Planning
- Recruitment Processes
- Job Evolution Plans
- Review of Performances

Challenges

Extensive and expensive project

Requires support of top management

Still faces “change readiness”

Tackles Complex Issues:

- Ex-Managers turned specialists
- Employees who “create” their own jobs (description)
- Pre – conceived notions on the values given to “female-type” v. “male-type” jobs (the gendered system)

Recap....

- 2008 – Interim provision in “Gender Equality Act”

Standards Iceland is asked to advise on the development of the standard

Technical Committee appointed who establishes working group

Working Group is responsible for drafting the text of the standard with the aid of experts in selected fields

- 2012: Action Group is formed
- 2013: Pilot project start
- 2015 First institution gets “certified” and pilot project ends
- 2016: New government is formed; bill passes making the Equal Pay Standard mandatory
- 2018: Law is implemented
- 2021: And here we are today – (not much has changed the %)

Was making it mandatory (law) a „Window of opportunity“?

- The whole process all about making it good PR – and progressive gender equality work.
- Right of centre coalition in 2016(7)
- Minister for gender equality – former head of “Business Iceland”
  - Proof of equal pay – in a system that still does not have “open books”
- Opening one window when closing others?
  - What does the Gender Equality Act say about equal pay?

The future of equal pay work

- There are problems with the Equal Pay Standard IST 85
  - Transparency issues - for employees
  - Enforcement issues – will “we” get reports on offenders ?
  - ISO – and criticism
- There are opportunities that exceed the negatives
  - Gender equality “freed from” traditional feminist circles (the liberals....?)
  - Equal pay as part of “good PR”
